

Fruit and Nut Cultivar Nursery Sources – 2020

By Daniel Becker¹, Shawn Wright¹, Patsy Wilson¹, John Strang¹,
Carol Sullivan², Christy Cassady¹, Joshua Knight¹ and Brett Wolff³

This fact sheet was developed to help locate nursery sources for fruit cultivars that are recommended in Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service publications or commonly asked for in Kentucky.

Each cultivar name in the list is followed by a • or several of these, which designate nurseries that carry this cultivar. This is followed by a list of nursery addresses, phone numbers, email addresses and website URLs. Several of the nurseries that are listed cater primarily to commercial growers. A list of a few horticultural equipment suppliers is located below.

A number of recommended nut cultivars are not currently available through nurseries. Scion wood for these may often be obtained through the Kentucky Nut Growers Association at their spring meeting, where scion wood is exchanged. For more information about the Kentucky Nut Growers Association, visit <https://www.facebook.com/Kentucky-Nut-Growers-Association-1599224510355036/>

This compilation is not intended to list all the nurseries that may carry a certain cultivar, nor does it imply endorsement of nurseries by the Cooperative Extension Service.

*Only Northern pecans and Chinese chestnuts are recommended for commercial production.

Hazelnuts have not been very productive in Kentucky and Eastern filbert blight-resistant varieties have not been completely resistant to all the disease strains that occur here.

Many recommended nut varieties are not available through commercial nurseries. Scion wood for grafting nut trees is often available through the Kentucky Nut Growers Association at their spring meeting.
